The Verizon Wireless iPhone 4S is only a 3G smartphone that is global ready. It doesn't have the radio hardware to access the 4G LTE network. If you had the the AT&T version of the iPhone 4S, you could access their HSPA+ network which is 3.5G or as some call it "4G with enhanced backhaul" (ie fake "4G"). I'm most definitely NOT a VZW employee.

In the past year we made a policy change to unlock our iPhone 4 and 4s. This required a software update to change some of the programming in the phone so it defaults to an unlocked status. If the phone has not been active on our service in the last year then it is very possible that it has missed this update.
